Dr. Lamb will share her Artist-in-Residence experience and her work at this free public presentation. Currently, Lambs' artistic interests involve exploring the relationships between our human-made music and the music of our natural world. This ongoing fascination has led to many projects, including concert length works for chamber orchestra with the living Earth, educational curricula and activities for all ages and abilities, and the development of Refugia Festival, a multidisciplinary event that advocates for environmental conservation through sound.

Dr. Lamb is a composer, percussionist, educator, festival founder, and arts administrator whose work aims to foster natural, historical, and societal relationships. She earned a Doctor of Musical Arts in Composition at the University of Michigan, a Master of Music in Composition at the Yale School of Music, and two Bachelor of Music degrees in Music Education and Percussion Performance from Northern Illinois University.
